Firewood Regulations

South Carolina's state agencies advise both residents and visitors to buy and use locally-sourced firewood to prevent the transport of pests like the emerald ash borer, Asian long horned beetle, Redbay ambrosia beetle, and red imported fire ant. Neighboring states have areas under quarantine for pests such as thousand cankers disease, European gypsy moth, and others - and it is illegal to move any regulated items (firewood is considered a regulated item) from quarantined zones out of those states and into South Carolina. Residents and visitors can protect South Carolina trees and forests by not moving firewood within the state of South Carolina, as well as to and from other states.
